Mary Shaw as the Heroine Will Address a Howling Mob-"The Bachelor," a Clyde Fitch Comedy, Among the New Offerings for Next Week-Bertha Galland to Appear in "The Return of Eve."

F timely interest at least will be the production of the English suffrage play, "Votes for Women," at Wallack's Theatre on Monday night, with Mary Shaw in the leading role. The author, Elizabeth Robins, is an American woman who for years has lived in England. Her play, given in London at the Court Theatre, will be staged here by the Actors' Society of America. The principal character, Vida Levering, has lived down her "past" and as a suffragette is devoting her life to "the future of woman." The first act shows her at the home of a young girl who ardently admires her and her work. The girl's flance, member of Parliament, proves to be "the man" in Vida Levering's past. The second act represents a suffrage meeting in Trafalgar Square. The women suffragists attempt to speak and are interrupted by hoots and catcalls. But gradually the women gain the mob's attention, and Vida at length succeeds in holding their interest. In the last act the girl learns Vida's story and breaks with her lover. She demands that he marry Vida, and he recognizes the justice of her ar-

"The Bachelor," a comedy by Clyde Fitch, with Charles Cherry in the title role, will be seen at the Maxine Elliott Theatre on Monday evening. The bachelor, who believes himself to be a confirmed woman-hater, is a Wall street confirmed woman-hater, is a Wall street broker. He shally falls in love with his stenographer, "Jenny," who proves to be the daughter of a California judge whose property was destroyed by the San Francisco earthquake. Her brother accuses the broker of tampering with her affections, and the girl also is made to doubt his love. But everything is simally straightened out and the bachelor sinds himself eager to bid good-by to single blessedness. Buth Mayellife will have the role of the etenographer, and other parts will be played by Christine Blessing, Janet Beecher, Richard Sterling, Ralph Morgan and Charles Laite.

Bertha Galland will appear at the Herald Square Theatre on Monday evening in "The Return of Eve," a three-act play by Lee W. Dodd. The plot deals with the experiences in New York of a young woman who is known as Eve and who has been reared in an idyllic wilderness known as Eden. Eve, disgusted with the superficiality of society, finally returns to Eden and comes to an understanding of her love for Adam, the companion of her childhood. Miss Galland's support will include Lester Lonergan, Frank Losee, Richard Buhler, Maude Turner Gordon, Kate Roller and Fanchon Campbell.
